BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

O remember not against us former iniquities: let thy tender mercies speedily prevent us: for we are brought very low. Help us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy name: and deliver us, and purge away our sins, for thy name's sake .- Psalm lxxix, 8, 9.

THE POST - OFFICE LINES

One of the features of the holiday season is the lines of people standing in front of post-office windows to get packages weighed and insured and stamped. It is slow work.

After a postal worker has taken in stuff from such a line for fours together the poor clerk's head must be buzzing with the mental labor of computing all these little sums and looking up the postage for the various zones. The rural post-offices are not so thronged, but in many Legion? What are the age requirecities and large towns the jam is at times very fierce.

The line in front of such windows is a depressing sight. The people stand first on one leg and then on the other. They feel thoroughly cross and out of sorts. If two friends meet in the line, they do not feel like ordinary cheerful converse. Their thoughts are centered on the nuisance of having to stand in line for 15 minutes or half an hour. They feel a grouchiness all out of keeping with the supposedly joyous Christmas season. For people who are physically frail or feeble, it is quite a strain.

It is something of a test of a person's self control, if he can stand in a line for half an hour without getting thoroughly cross. If people. get grouchy at having to wait for half an hour, what do they think of the poor postal workers, who have to stand this rush hour after hour for an average of 10 days?

And all this standing in line could be avoided, if more people would form the habit of buying and sending their Christmas gifts earlier. Every year they are most earnestly requested to do so. Every year they semicivilized tribes of Nahuatlan think they will do so, and every year when the time comes, they postpone their gift buying and sending until a late date. As a result they subject themselves and the postal workers to the nuisance of this jam. its

THE BISHOP WHO CHEATED

This happened 30 years ago and I wasn't there, but a boy who saw it told me. He's a minister, himself, now, and a far better man of religion than the man of religion who is the villain of the story.

There was a gambler in a little eastern summer resort, and there was also a hishop. A small boy was fascinated by the gambler, made tablished twenty-two years ago. friends with him, and spent hours with him along the seashore, listen- ently has affected only a number his campaign expenses, and did ing to his stories.... The bishop thought it a very bad thing for the youngster to be spending so much time with a gambler. He spoke to the held responsible. Working couples death onto his portfolio. Meanboy's mother about it ;he told her the gambler was a bad, bad manas he probably was, in some respects, and poor company for a boy. . . . But the boy's mother did nothing about it. That has nothing, really to one of the clerks, explains it. "Maydo with the story. It is set down here, merely to show that the bishop be that's what keeps 'em poor."

It was great fun for the spec- of the Red Ants? Peter who only tators, but would have been mighty so short a while ago had seen what looked down on the gambler as a cheat.

A few days later the gambler and the boy stood near a croquet court, watching the bishop and his family playing a game. Just for fun, of seem to feel they had a tough time hearty cheers for his sportsman- en prisoner without any of you across it with bacon over them. when they attempt to reduce their veritable Zaro Agha before flabcourse.... The bishop was losing and he didn't seem to like it. So he cheated! He moved his ball over, so he would have a clear shot through a wicket and he won a glorious, last-shot victory.... And just at that point the gambler had his revenge. In a voice loud enough to be heard all over the court he said to the boy:

"Son, I've lived a hard life in a hard business. And maybe I've not always been as honest as I might be. But I'll tell you one thing I've never done. I've never been low enough to cheat my own family. Whatever else I may have done, I've never done that."

Th bishop has been dead these many years. The gambler died long ago. The boy grew up to become-not a gambler, but a man of religion. But I'm puzzled. I think that in some ways that gambler was a better man than the bishop who cheated his family, but wasn't the bishop a more helpful human being? The gambler took away men's money, the bizhop tried to give them faith. The bishop must have done much good during his life, the gambler must have done far more harm than good. The gambler ruined weak and foolish men and did terrible hurt to their blameless families, and the bishop probably comforted and gave hope to many a sad heart. He died in honor and the gambler, perhaps, unnoticed... But the small boy who became, himself, a minister, remembers the gambler with affection and the bishop merely as one who the same robust unconcern that anxious to appoint him anyway. cheated his family in a game of croquet.

Can you untangle all the threads in that story of the bishop and the gamblers and come to some clear opinion of those two men? As for der this establishment off the liberate and wilful complacency in me, I don't feel quite equal to it.

O remember not against us former iniquities: let thy tender mercies speedily prevent us: for we are brought very low. Help us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy name: and deliver us, and purge away our sins, for thy name's sake.-Psalm lxxix, 8, 9.

THE POST - OFFICE LINES

After a postal worker has taken in stuff from such a line for fours together the poor clerk's head must be buzzing with the mental labor of computing all these little sums and looking up the postage for the various zones. The rural post-offices are not so thronged, but in many Legion? cities and large towns the jam is at times very fierce.

The line in front of such windows is a depressing sight. The people stand first on one leg and then on the other. They feel thoroughly cross and out of sorts. If two friends meet in the line, they do not feel like ordinary cheerful converse. Their thoughts are centered on the nuisance of having to stand in line for 15 minutes or half an hour. They feel a grouchiness all out of keeping with the supposedly joyous Christmas season. For people who are physically frail or feeble, it is quite a strain.

It is something of a test of a person's self control, if he can stand love apple and was considered poisin a line for half an hour without getting thoroughly cross. If people. get grouchy at having to wait for half an hour, what do they think of the poor postal workers, who have to stand this rush hour after hour for an average of 10 days?

And all this standing in line could be avoided, if more people would form the habit of buying and sending their Christmas gifts earlier. Every year they are most earnestly requested to do so. Every year they think they will do so, and every year when the time comes, they postpone their gift buying and sending until a late date. As a result they subject themselves and the postal workers to the nuisance of this jam. its immediate vicinity. According

This happened 30 years ago and I wasn't there, but a boy who saw it told me. He's a minister, himself, now, and a far better man of religion than the man of religion who is the villain of the story.

There was a gambler in a little eastern summer resort, and there was also a hishop. A small boy was fascinated by the gambler, made friends with him, and spent hours with him along the seashore, listenyoungster to be spending so much time with a gambler. And just at that point the gambler had his revenge. In a voice loud enough to be heard all over the court he said to the boy:

"Son, I've lived a hard life in a hard business. And maybe I've not always been as honest as I might be. But I'll tell you one thing I've never done. I've never been low enough to cheat my own family. Whatever else I may have done, I've never done that."

LESTER PRICE SAYS STOPPING END RUNS OR SHOTS AT BASKET THE SAME TO HIM

Here is another reason why Xenia Central High School's current basketball team hopes to enjoy a successful court season. Lester Price, a senior, is one of the main cogs in the Buccaneer court machine, playing a guard position and helping direct the quintet on offense. Lester earned his basketball spurs last season as a member of the Xenia five which retained the Miami Valley League title for the third straight season; and received honorable mention when the mythical all-league teams made their appearance at the close of the season. A good dribbler, he is clever at handling the ball and is an accurate shot when opportunity presents itself.

Price was also one of the most versatile members of the Buccaneer football eleven during the 1930 campaign and was rewarded by being selected at end on the all-M. V. L. team picked by the coaches at the close of the season. Playing a wing position, he was on the receiving end of many passes, did a good job of punting all season and was often pulled into the backfield to run with the ball. In his junior year he played most of the time at center. He also takes a prominent part in other school activities and is, by the way, an Eagle Scout.

McARTHUR, O., Dec. 23.—A present of $50,000 was dropped into the Christmas stocking of 12-yearold Paul Baynard Bay today by & ruling of Common Pleas Judge J. W. Darby which dismissed a suft to set aside the adoption six years ago of the youth by Mr. and Mrs.

Iraenus N. Bay. The ruling clears the way for the lad to receive the $50,000 estate of his foster parents. Charleen Bay, a niece of Bay, had sought to prove that coersion was used by several persons to obtain the boy's adoption by Bay and his wife. The court decided, however, that Bay was mentally capable of adopting the child.

LESTER PRICE SAYS STOPPING END RUNS OR SHOTS AT BASKET THE SAME TO HIM

Here is another reason why Xenia Central High School's current basketball team hopes to enjoy a successful court season. Lester Price, a senior, is one of the main cogs in the Buccaneer court machine, playing a guard position and helping direct the quintet on offense. Lester earned his basketball spurs last season as a member of the Xenia five which retained the Miami Valley League title for the third straight season; and received honorable mention when the mythical all-league teams made their appearance at the close of the season. A good dribbler, he is clever at handling the ball and is an accurate shot when opportunity presents itself.

Price was also one of the most versatile members of the Buccaneer football eleven during the 1930 campaign and was rewarded by being selected at end on the all-M. L. team picked by the coaches at the close of the season. Playing a wing position, he was on the receiving end of many passes, did a good job of punting all season and was often pulled into the backfield to run with the ball. In his junior year he played most of the time at center. He also takes a prominent part in other school activities and is, by the way, an Eagle Scout.

YOUTH GETS $50,000 INHERITANCE, SAID

MoARTHUR, O., Dec. 23.—A present of $50,000 was dropped into the Christmas stocking of 12-yearold Paul Baynard Bay today by & ruling of Common Pleas Judge J. W. Darby which dismissed a suft to set aside the adoption six years ago of the youth by Mr. and Mrs. Iraenus N. Bay.

The ruling clears the way for the lad to receive the $50,000 estate of his foster parents. Charleen Bay, a niece of Bay, had sought to prove that coersion was used by several persons to obtain the boy's adoption by Bay and his wife. The court decided, however, that Bay was mentally capable of

HOSPITAL TO CLOSE RESULT OF FAILURE OF BONDS TO PASS

ASHTABULA, O., Dec. 23. Ashtabula General Hospital, an in stitution of ninety beds which has a daily average of ninety patients will close about June 1, 1931, be cause of lack of funds, the board of trustees has announced.

The hospital was formally open ed in June, 1904 and has been sup ported through donations from in dividuals and by the Community Fund. A balance of assets was never realized, it is said.

The financial situation became so acute this year that the board of trustees was forced to seek aid from the city. In the recent election, a $150,000 bond issue was de feated. Had the bond issue passed the hospital would have been enabled to continue to operate.

The trustees were forced to face the proposition of raising enough money to build a steam heating plant on the hospital grounds in addition to other expansion and improvements.

Steam for heat, sterilization and other purposes now is supplied by the Cleveland Electric Illuminat ing Co. power plant near the hos pital, but this plant will be closed about June 1 when the new $11, 000,000 lake-front plant begins One of the most important improvements needed at the anti-quated hospital is the fireproofing a considerable section. The state fire marshal states that work must be done at once if the hos pital expects to be permitted to

HOSPITAL TO CLOSE RESULT OF FAILURE OF BONDS TO PASS

ASHTABULA, O., Dec. 23. Ashtabula General Hospital, an institution of ninety beds which has a daily average of ninety patients, will close about June 1, 1931, because of lack of funds, the board of trustees has announced.

The hospital was formally opened in June, 1904 and has been supported through donations from individuals and by the Community Fund. A balance of assets was never realized, it is said.

The financial situation became so acute this year that the board of trustees was forced to seek aid from the city. In the recent elecion, a $150,000 bond issue was de feated. Had the bond issue passed the hospital would have been enabled to continue to operate.

The trustees were forced to face the proposition of raising enough money to build a steam heating plant on the hospital grounds in addition to other expansion and improvements.

Steam for heat, sterilization and other purposes now is supplied by the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. power plant near the hospital, but this plant will be closed about June 1 when the new $11, 000,000 lake-front plant begins

One of the most important improvements needed at the antiquated hospital is the fireproofing of a considerable section. The state fire marshal states that work must be done at once if the hospital expects to be permitted to

No new patients will be re-eived after April 1, when the closng order is expected to be given. Sixty days will be allowed in which to clear the hospital of

The crisis is one of the worst ever faced by the city, as there are no other hospital commodaions here. Ashtabula has a population of 25,000 persons.

HOME CHILDREN TO AGAIN FEAST ON TURKEY CHRISTMAS

Greene County raised turkeys will be the principal item on the Christmas Day menu planned for the 696 children of the O.S. and

The birds were purchased by the state from Lloyd Sheffield, farmer near Jamestown, who raised them He will deliver about 600 pounds of the dressed fowl to the Home. Between fifty and sixty turkeys were ordered.

In addition to turkey, the menu for the holiday dinner will include dressing, gravy, mashed potatoes, creamed peas, cranberry sauce, fruit salad, celery, ice cream, fruit cake and milk

Surmounted by an electric star, a gayly decorated Christmas tree will occupy a conspicuous spot in the dining room at the institution when the children file in for break fast. Each table will be decorated with potted poinsettias, and tall candles, which will be lighted as they enter, will be at either end. At each place there will be a pound box of candy, oranges and nuts, the gift of the Home management, Mountain laurel Christmas bells and festooning will decorate the will be the principal item on the Christmas Day menu planned for the 696 children of the O. S. and

The birds were purchased by the state from Lloyd Sheffield, farmer near Jamestown, who raised them. He will deliver about 600 pounds of the dressed fowl to the Home. Between fifty and sixty turkeys were ordered.

In addition to turkey, the menu for the holiday dinner will include dressing, gravy, mashed potatoes, creamed peas, cranberry sauce, fruit salad, celery, ice cream, fruit cake and milk.

Surmounted by an electric star, a gayly decorated Christmas tree will occupy a conspicuous spot in the dining room at the institution when the children file in for break fast. Each table will be decorated with potted poinsettias, and tall candles, which will be lighted as they enter, will be at either end. At each place there will be a pound box of candy, oranges and nuts, the gift of the Home management Mountain laurel Christmas bells and festooning will decorate the
